

In this worksheet, you'll find some interesting ways you can utilize tactile methods in language learning.

- Make some words out of clay, lay the words on a flat surface and memorize them.

- Stack or play dominoes.

- Get yourself some manga tiles and try attaching flashcards onto your creation.

- Take a nature walk barefoot and just reconnect with earth (yeah it sounds all hippyish). This is a great meditation exercise for tactile learners!

- Practice the art of Origami. Write sentences on paper and go over them as you make the folds into your paper.

- Use play money to help with numbers. Be sure to feel throughout the money and memorize its value.

These are just a few ideas, but by all means, let us know if you come up with some ideas of your own.
